

Press of Nation Praises Army's Handling of Civilian Conservation Corps

The way the Army has taken hold of the tremendous task of handling the Civilian Conservation Corps has invoked the admiration of editors of leading newspapers of the country. Praise of the smooth and efficient management of the problem is heard on all sides.

Protest in the press against the reduction of Regular Service widow's pensions continues.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch states:

"We are constrained to believe, not only that the army is doing an excellent job in organizing the Civilian Conservation Corps, but that no other agency could do it nearly as well or inexpensively.

"Out at Jefferson Barracks, the civilians are streaming in at the rate of 700 per day. Some 1100 men are already on the ground and, by June 7, the full complement for this district—9700 men—will be assembled. To receive the men is only a small garrison of 330 enlisted men, 25 Regular officers and 60 Organized Reserve Officers. They have risen admirably to the occasion. * * *

"We commend Col. Walter Krueger and his aids for the speed and effectiveness of their work. We know of no finer use for the army in peace time than to be of aid in the fine project of taking the unemployed off the streets."

The Globe-Democrat of St. Louis has the following comment:

"The first contingent of the Civilian Conservation Corps to receive its training and do its first work under the direction of the regular army forces at Jefferson Barracks may well serve as pattern for other contingents now assembling and still other contingents to follow. * * *

"It is to be hoped that 9700 recruits who are now assembling at the rate of about 700 a day and who will all be in camp and under training and conditioning by June 7 will do as well for themselves. And they probably will, for the same sympathetic direction and encouragement given the first draft at the army post will be given the second. With only 300 men in his command Colonel Krueger is doing good work."

"The Army's job in reconditioning and equipping the reforestation cohorts, has subjected it to a test more severe than the average citizen realizes," comments the San Diego Union.

"The normal tasks of the army depend upon strict authority, discipline and a complete reliance upon the regulations. This new job demands some of the same qualities that the army would have to show in the field, pitted against a military enemy. It demands an exercise of judgment and a constant alertness to new situations. Regulations don't hold. Authority is at a discount in dealing with the rugged individualists of the forest army.

"Confronted with a military emergency, we would have the right to demand strict efficiency from the army. Displaying its effectiveness in this new type of emergency, the army is displaying qualities 'above and beyond' what we have a right to ask."

Sharply criticizing the inequities of the reduced pensions for widows, the Washington Post declares:

"The most cruel discrimination under the new system seems to be against the widows of officers who have spent their lives in the service. * * *

"Why should temporary service in a peaceful occupation afford greater security to dependents than a lifetime in defense of the country? No doubt the Veterans Administration will take note of these cases and endeavor to iron out inequalities wherever they appear. * * *

"The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL recounts the case of the widow of a major general who served in the Spanish-American war, the Philippine Insurrection, the invasion of Mexico in 1916, and the World War. After this major general retired in 1922 he was unable to keep up his Government insurance. His widow, now over 70 years of age, has been receiving a pension of $30 per month from the Government, but under the new regulations this will be cut to $15.

"This case is contrasted with that of the widow of a young man who was drafted to a labor regiment in the World War. Four days after he entered the service he died of a disease presumably contracted before he was drafted. But the young man was automatically insured, and a $30 pension was added to the insurance benefits paid to his widow. This young woman quit her job because her husband's four days of labor for Uncle Sam gives her an income of $87.50 per month."

service is 8,300 exclusive of technical and special trucks. During the past year there has been a total on hand of 6,210 of which exactly 4,133 are hold-over war types, which because of their age and long service represent costly upkeep and low efficiency. Even under the extreme pressure of economy it has been necessary to recommend the salvaging of 2,416 during the year, so that it has been estimated that on July 1, 1933, there will be only 3,794 on hand—a shortage of 4,515 below the very minimum needs.

Mechanization, too, is suffering through lack of proper materiel. It is a known fact that the newly mechanized First Cavalry at Ft. Knox, Ky., has not been able to go forward with the adequate training and experimentation because of the lack of necessary equipment. Of the little funds available for new combat cars much has gone to this unit, but even that has not been sufficient for needs. It is hoped that under the public works program money for the complete mechanization of two regiments of Cavalry will be provided.

In view of the Department's announced policy of extending the Army's mechanization work in the Cavalry arm, it might be assumed that the bulk of funds for that purpose will go to the Cavalry.

For the Air Corps the public works program is asked to supply 1,100 fighting planes and to modernize and supply sufficient technical construction to care for them.

By executive order, President Roosevelt appointed Brig. Gen. Hugh Johnson, formerly of the Regular Army, as Administrator for Industrial Recovery under the public works bill. A special board for public works was appointed on which the Secretary of War has membership as well as Col. George R. Spalding, CE, USA, who has been working on the project for some time.

This Week—

There hasn't been a hitch, though the men taken care of are not under Army discipline and can take French leave whenever they desire. The General Staff and the Quartermaster General are especially entitled to praise for this fine piece of work. * * *

The country was gratified to learn that 32 naval vessels are to be built under the public works program—gratified because we are at last taking steps toward a treaty navy and parity. But the mistake should not be made of assuming that this building program will give us parity. If Great Britain merely carries out its regular annual program of laying down three cruisers, nine destroyers and three submarines during the remaining years of the life of the treaty we will lack three cruisers, 52 destroyers and 18 submarines of equality. A few more millions from the three billion public works fund could not be better spent.

Reorganizing Disbursements

The executive order consolidating all procurement and disbursing activities of the Government, if carried into effect, will require that practically every officer of the Army and Navy, as well as numerous officials of the civil branches of the Government, will have to be bonded.

The requirement is there in black and white, whether intended or not. Money shall be disbursed, it is provided in the executive order, "only upon the certification of persons by law duly authorized to incur obligations upon behalf of the United States." "The function of accountability for improper certification shall be transferred to such persons 'the order further states,' and no disbursing officer shall be held accountable therefor."

This will mean, finance officers declare, that every company commander who certifies as to his company payroll, every lieutenant who approves the subsistence allowance of an enlisted man, every person in the military, naval or civilian service who certifies as to obligations of the Government, will be responsible therefor, instead of the disbursing officer who pays the obligation, as is now the practice. Necessarily, these certifying officers, as they are responsible to the Government, will have to be bonded for the proper performance of their duties. It will mean an increase in the number of bonds required by tenfold.

Meanwhile, the situation as regards the consolidation has been practically at a standstill. The agencies of the War and Navy Departments which will be affected by the consolidation have absolutely no information as to what is intended under the scheme. Neither the Director of Procurement, nor the Chief Disbursing Officer, positions created by the executive order, have been appointed as yet. Of course, the order does not become effective until 60 days from the date issued, two weeks ago.

While the Bureau of the Budget may be making some plans in connection with the consolidation, it is expected that the two new offices, which are to be under the Treasury Department, will be set up and then allowed to work out their own system. General opinion is that the Army and Navy will not be greatly affected. Some hold that nothing will be done at all under the authority, while others contend that the Director of Procurement will content himself with determining the "policies and methods" of procurement, warehousing and distribution, and not attempt to take over existing agencies. Even if the Director does attempt to exercise the power granted, it is considered inconceivable by officers that he should include the armed services. Such a system would involve power without responsibility, as self-evident failing, for the Army and Navy cannot be expected to carry out the National Defense without having charge of these important components of the defense.

Service Pensions

Liberalization of some of the provisions of the pension regulations has been made by the President as a result of insistent public protest and the revolt in Congress against excess cuts.

By executive order issued this week widows who are employed by the Federal Government will be entitled to receive pensions denied them by the original restrictive regulations. Another amendment to the regulations allows children of deceased veterans to draw pensions until they are 18 years of age instead of 16 as provided not only by the March regulations but by the old law as well. In addition, children who are attending school, may continue on the pension rolls until 21 years of age.

Increased pensions for service-connected disabled veterans are also provided under new regulations promulgated this week. The rates for war-time disabled has been increased, providing for compensation ranging from $9 to $90 per month depending upon the degree of disability. The rate provided in the March regulations was $8 to $80. Rates for peace-time service-connected disabilities have also been increased. From a range of $6 to $30 per month the pension has been raised to a range of $6 to $45 per month.

In addition, officers and men of the services, disabled in combat in time of peace, such as veterans of military occupations or expeditions such as those in Haiti, Nicaragua or China, will hereafter receive the same pension as is granted to service-connected war veterans. Widows of service personnel who are killed in such combats or who die as a result of injuries thus incurred will be entitled to the same pension as is provided for widows and dependents of World War veterans.

Peace-time veterans with service-connected disabilities will in the future be entitled to hospitalization under the Veterans' Administration under the new regulations to the extent of present available facilities.

Medical Service in the Combat Zone

by LT. COL. T. E. DARBY, MC, USA

THE medical service in the combat zone is a very comprehensive subject which can best be summarized under its major functions—evacuation, hospitalization, supply and administration. In order to give the effect of continuity in its proper sequence these functions must be considered in each of the main echelons of medical activity, the infantry division, the corps and the army.

The Division Medical Service: This comprises medical detachments attached to regiments, trains and other component units of the division, and the medical regiment which is attached to the division as a whole.

Evacuation: Evacuation within the infantry division extends from the front lines to the division hospital station. In this zone evacuation is inextricably bound up with first aid.

The evacuation elements in the division are divided into two parts, viz, medical detachments, and the collecting and ambulance battalions of the medical regiment. Of the detachments, the medical detachment with the infantry regiment has by far the most important mission. It is divided into a headquarters medical detachment and three battalion medical sections. Each battalion medical section is broken down into a part which is attached to each combat company, a part to act as litter bearers and a part to establish the battalion aid station. The wounded receive their initial first aid on or near the firing line. Walking wounded are directed back, and recumbent wounded are littered back to the battalion aid stations. In the rear regimental area they go to the regimental aid station.

At the battalion or regimental aid stations the wounded, after receiving further first aid if necessary, are taken over by the litter bearers from the collecting company which normally establishes a collecting station behind each infantry brigade. The walking cases are directed into the collecting station, while the more seriously wounded are littered in either all the way, or to ambulance loading posts established in advance of the collecting station.

At the collecting station, which is established about a mile behind the brigade front, the wounded are given a little more elaborate first aid than was possible at the aid stations and again made ready for prompt evacuation. This evacuation is effected by the ambulance company which normally establishes an ambulance station in rear of each collecting station. The evacuation here is to the hospital station. In addition, whenever possible, it places ambulance loading posts in advance of the collecting station to reduce the arduous task of litter bearing in that area.

Hospitalization: The hospitalization elements in the division are represented by the hospital battalion of the medical regiment. It has a bed capacity of 750. It establishes a hospital station usually 4-8 miles back of the front lines. The hospital station is the bottleneck through which all of the division casualties pass on their way to the rear. The name "hospital station" is rather misleading, as the character of work possible here is little more than a glorified first aid. The wounded are promptly sorted and prepared for further transportation to the rear by means of army ambulances. Any non-evacuable wounded are sent to an army surgical hospital which normally establishes right alongside of the division hospital station for this purpose. This will be further discussed under the Army Medical Service.

Supply: The supply features within the division are represented by the medical, dental or veterinary supplies normally carried by each medical detachment and the medical regiment. Moreover, in the medical regiment there is the medical supply section of the headquarters and service company, which establishes at the hospital station a medical distributing point to supply the entire division.

Administration: The administration of medical detachments is under the surgeon of the unit who is responsible to his commanding officer, the unit commander.

The commanding officer of the medical regiment is also the division surgeon. As commanding officer of the regiment he administers it from his command post, which in combat is usually at the hospital station. As division commander he is a member of the special staff of the division commander and his staff office is normally located at the rear echelon of division headquarters.

The Corps Medical Service: Having discussed the division medical service, there is nothing new in regard to organization to be introduced under the corps medical service. The two organizations are practically identical. However, since corps troops serve in rear areas and suffer comparatively light casualties, the functioning of the corps medical service is quite different from that in the division.

Evacuation: This is an evacuation of casualties from corps troops—not the whole corps. So far as medical detachments are concerned the service is similar to that in the division, i.e., an evacuation to battalion or regimental aid stations.

The ambulance battalion of the corps medical regiment is needed only in part for the care of corps troops. The remainder is a reserve for similar units in division or army medical regiments. Usually one ambulance company, or even one platoon, can furnish the necessary evacuation. In this case the evacuation is directly from aid stations of corps troops to the corps hospital stations. Being in rear areas no collecting stations are established, since ambulances can reach the aid stations; therefore collecting stations would be an unnecessary link in the chain of evacuation. The collecting battalion then becomes a reserve for similar units in the divisions composing the corps.

Hospitalization: Hospitalization similar to that in each division is established by the hospital battalion of the corps medical regiment. One hospital company usually is sufficient, centrally established in the corps area. The remaining companies are in reserve. This hospital station is for the care of corps troops.

Supply: Supply of corps troops is entirely analogous to that in each division belonging to the corps. The corps medical distributing point is for corps troops—not for the divisions contained in the corps.

(To be concluded next week)

Award Honorary Degrees

Chicago—The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred on Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commanding the Sixth Corps Area, by the Michigan State College at the commencement exercises held on June 12.

The State Journal, published in Lansing, Michigan, commenting on the honor bestowed on General Parker, published an editorial extracts from which follow: "Narrow, indeed, would be the view of one seeing anything incongruous in the bestowal of the degree of doctor of laws on Maj. Gen. Frank Parker. The faculty and board of Michigan State College are to be complimented on their discernment in that they have seen in General Parker a person eminently fitted for the bestowal of their honorary degree.

"General Parker is highly trained and highly experienced in the art of war.

But he is so trained and so experienced because he believes primarily in the reign of law. He is a defender of law not an enemy of it. War, at times, is described as perfect anarchy, the very antithesis of law. Well, so it is, in a sense, but the impression that General Parker has always given by his attitude is that his intent in war is the speediest restoration of law and order. To that end General Parker has always given the impression of the highest professional standing and skill. He is no swashbuckler, no saber rattler, he is a defender of law. In bestowing on him the honorary degree of doctor of laws Michigan State College has done well."

Ft. McPherson, Ga.—Maj. Gen. Edw. L. King, Fourth Corps Area commander, who delivered the address to this year's graduating class at the University of Alabama on May 23, 1933, was honored by that institution with honorary degree of Doctor of Law (LLD).

Dr. George H. Denny, President of the University, in conferring the degree on General King made the following remarks:

"By virtue of the authority vested in me by the trustees of the University of Alabama, I have the honor to confer the degree of Doctor of Law (LLD.) upon Maj. Gen. Edward L. King, native of Massachusetts, commanding officer of the Fourth Corps Area, U. S. Army, a graduate of the United States Military Academy of the Class of 1896.

"General King has served with high distinction through all the ranks from second lieutenant to major general. He is a distinguished graduate of the army service schools, including the Army War College.

"Included in the catalogue of his achievements, General King has served with credit and honor as commandant of the Cavalry School and the General Service Schools, and as assistant chief of staff of the War Department.

"In recognition of his unusual attainments as a scholar, of his outstanding service to the entire country, and to this region in particular, the University of Alabama is glad to recognize his notable career as soldier and his fine qualities as civilian and to enter his name on the roster of its distinguished alumni."

In speaking of the incident General King said, "The action of the University of Alabama in so honoring me came as a very happy surprise and needless to say I appreciate it deeply."

Macon Placed in Commission

The giant new airship Macon was yesterday placed in commission as a ship of the Navy. Rear Adm. Ernest J. King, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, formally accepted the Macon from its builders and turned her over to Comdr. Alger H. Dresel, USN, commanding officer of the ship. The ship will proceed to the Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., where she will be based during the summer.

Trial flights of the Macon were concluded on June 14 when the trial board headed by Rear Adm. George C. Day, USN, president of the Board of Inspection and Survey, recommended preliminary acceptance of the airship subject to post trial examinations. The trial flights were made with the Macon operated by officers and men of the United States Navy, who will be attached to the airship when she is placed in commission as a ship of the United States Navy.

In addition to Commander Dresel, other officers to be attached to the Macon will be:

Lt. Comdr. J. C. Arnold, USN, executive officer.

Lt. H. N. Coulter, USN, watch and communication officer.

Lt. W. E. Zimmerman, USN, first lieutenant.

Chief Boatswain W. A. Buckley, USN, assistant first lieutenant.

Lt. (Jg) J. D. Reppy, USN, watch officer.

Chief Machinist E. C. Thurman, USN, assistant engineer officer.

Lt. C. M. Bolster (CC), USN, technical officer.

The Macon will operate from the Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., directly under the Chief of Naval Operations, pending material readiness for flight to the West Coast. When ready materially and weather conditions are suitable, not later than Oct. 20, 1933, the Macon will proceed to and base at the Naval Air Station, Sunnyvale, Calif., reporting to and operating under Commander Aircraft, Battle Force.

Admiral Standley's Aide

Lt. Comdr. Jack H. Duncan, USN, has been ordered to duty as Aide to the new Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William H. Standley, USN, who will relieve Admiral William V. Pratt on July 1.

Award Navy Cross

The Secretary of the Navy in the name of the President of the United States has awarded the Navy Cross to Thomas Marvin Lynch, Chief Pharmacist's Mate, USN, for service in Nicaragua, while serving as a Lieutenant in the Nicaraguan National Guard.

Action on Akron Report

While the report of the congressional committee investigating the Akron disaster has not as yet formally reached the Navy Department, action upon some of the committee's recommendations has already gotten under way.

Negotiations have been made with the Weather Bureau for the furnishing of four general weather maps per day instead of the two at present, and it is expected that this service will be started. One of the reasons given for the Akron crash was the absence of adequate weather information, and the congressional committee recommended that the number of maps furnished be increased from two to four per day.

A survey of the material fitness of the Los Angeles will probably be made, with a view to recommissioning the vessel for use as a training craft for lighter-than-air personnel. While this is desired by the Bureau of Aeronautics, it is not expected that the Los Angeles will be placed in commission unless additional funds are forthcoming from the Bureau of the Budget for operating the ship. The Bureau of Aeronautics and the Department would be opposed to laying up an aircraft carrier or a squadron or two of airplanes to get funds for airship training.

The policy of returning lighter-than-air officers to duty with surface vessels every few years is expected to be continued by the Navy Department despite the supplemental report of the Akron committee warning the Department against this policy. Practically all officers of the Navy, including at least some of the airship officers, are convinced that this policy should be continued.

Engineering Duty Only

A board to consider applications (for engineering duty only officers to be assigned to duty with material under the Bureau of Engineering), will convene approximately Oct. 24, 1933. All applications for assignment to engineering duty only should be addressed to the Chief of the Bureau of Navigation and should be forwarded at such time as to arrive in the Bureau not later than Oct. 14, 1933.

The approved policy provides for the annual assignment of not more than five officers. In general, the assignment will be confined to lieutenant commanders. Applications are particularly desired from officers of the Naval Academy classes 1913 to 1918, inclusive. Officers of and above the rank of lieutenant are eligible to make application for this designation and their applications will receive consideration by the board.

The board will consider only those applications submitted through official channels, appended indorsements, the officers' records, and special letters from officers under whose direct supervision the applicant has served.

A Marine Writes

"Black Bagdad," by Capt. John Houston Craige, USMC, is a book of unusual significance to members of the military establishment of the United States because it seems possible that it may mark a swing in American public opinion toward a more sane and realistic consideration of problems with which the military man has to deal.

Of recent years our book-marts have been flooded with works by American authors dealing with the tropical countries with which we have relations. These books marked an established trend of thought among our people. All have been written from the same viewpoint. Natives of these countries have been praised beyond all bounds. Their virtues have been magnified. Nothing has been said of their vices.

The officer of the military services has longed for someone who would write an informed and honest book presenting some of these populations as they really are, depicting their vices as well as their virtues, their amazing complexities and their astounding naiveties, so that the American public could read and be informed of the real picture.

Black Bagdad is such a book. There was a school of editors who said the book could not succeed. They maintained that other Americans, other officers, had written books of realism and the public would have none of them. The military viewpoint, they said, was deadly. In spite of this Black Bagdad has gone into two editions with another in immediate prospect although it has been on the stands only about two months in the worst days the bookselling industry has ever known.

These are days when the literary trend is towards realism. Perhaps the success of Black Bagdad marks a swing towards realism in the consideration of the problem of our national dealings with the natives of tropical countries. Perhaps it is merely a tribute to an extraordinarily well-written and fascinating book.

The author was assigned to the Gendarmerie d'Haiti, the negro constabulary of that republic, for a three year period. He knew French and was an amateur anthropologist. He worked and studied hard. In Black Bagdad he tells us some of the things he saw, heard and did. He tells of voodoo rites, cannibalism and death-wangas. There is a breath-taking description of the skinning and eating of an American Marine by a caco band, and many fascinating studies of the complex reactions of the upper-class townspeople.

The book has received many remarkable tributes. Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord, USA-Ret, wrote "If this book gets what it deserves you are going to see it a seller for many years to come." Brig. Gen. Dion Williams, in the Marine Corps Gazette said: "The best book yet written on Haiti."

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1933

"... I would especially invite you to consider; first, the importance of preparing for war in time of peace. . . ."—ULYSSES S. GRANT.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAS AN EXCELLENT opportunity to make good on his appeal to industry to provide a living wage to its workers and to set an example for its guidance. It lies in the policy he must proclaim within the next few days as to the continuance of the cut in pay and allowances applied to the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps. The order which he issued, imposing a 15% pay cut for officers and men, will expire on June 30, concurrently with the one reducing the rental and subsistence allowances. A new order covering the pay for the coming six months period must then be issued. The President forecasts a rise in prices as a result of the enforcement of the Industrial Recovery Act and the policy of treasury inflation which is being pursued. Already that rise is occurring in certain lines, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace confidently expects it will apply to bread and other foodstuffs and to cotton. Indeed, the Administration is looking forward to rises in the price of every product. Again, the President has stressed the importance of industry paying a living wage, and a living wage means sufficient compensation to purchase the necessities required by a standard. For example, the President of a Corporation has greater and heavier expenses than the laborer in his mill. Taking these basic facts into consideration, and especially the increase in costs for which his policies are driving, it is hoped the President will decide to announce the abandonment of the cut in both pay and allowances. At the very least some concessions must be made, especially as married officers, who are assigned to C.C.C. duty, have no accommodations for their families, and are thus required to maintain two separate establishments. We have been advised that in order to meet their expenses many of these officers are forced to go into debt. The President cannot want such a situation to exist; it is unfair to the officers and unfair to the Government. The enlisted men likewise are suffering from the low pay they are receiving. It is clear that the way for the Government to impress upon industry its appeal to provide better living conditions is to grant improvement in those for the men who wear the uniform. Let us hope the President will be consistent in this important matter.

WE HAVE REFERRED IN A PAST ISSUE to our gratification at the action of the Director of the C.C.C. in stimulating interest among the campers by providing for an increase in compensation for those who show merit. The same principle should apply to the enlisted men of the Armed Services. Yet it has been abandoned by the Director of the Budget, who is responsible for the elimination of the reward for qualification in arms. Small as was the pay of the enlisted men, it was cut 15%. Then the bonus for reenlistment, which was always regarded as a part of pay, was taken away from them by an economy driven Congress. On top of these slashes, the Chief of Staff was forced to announce stoppage of the allowance for arms qualification. It is argued there was no justification for the continuance of this allowance in view of the orders directing cessation of all target practice. The fact remains, however, that the men who qualified for the efficient handling of their respective weapons would continue, if permitted to draw the allowance, to maintain their standing, even though it were necessary for them personally to buy ammunition and thus pursue their practice. Aside from the question of the small amount of money involved, the abandonment of target practice will tend to reduce efficiency, in spite of everything both officers and men may do. During the World War, General Pershing insisted upon thorough training in the use of arms before he would permit units to enter into battle, in this policy differing sharply from that being pursued in the United States. Events demonstrated that General Pershing was right. If the Army and the Navy are to be effective instruments, target practice must be resumed, and to encourage the men the small rewards given for qualification should be reauthorized.

INTERNATIONAL DISARMAMENT HAS SLIPPED into the background of world interest now that the Economic Conference is sitting. Yet it is with us and will continue to be the subject of discussion by the Governments participating in the Geneva meeting. In Administration circles in Washington, the belief prevails that adoption of the new ship and air building program by President Roosevelt will impress foreign nations with our intention to build to the limits of the London Treaty, unless a disarmament agreement be reached. In short, the announcement of the program is part bluff, but it will be carried out if there be failure at Geneva. Japan has countered by saying she will increase her building program. It may be this will turn out to be the fact, for the Tokyo Government, involved as it is in China, feels it must prepare for eventualities, and there are many of those in the offing as a result of her military activity. It is possible the disarmament question will loom in the discussion at London, and that some concessions will be offered to American opinion in return for economic concessions from our delegation. It is noted in this connection that Norman Davis, Ambassador at large, stopped at London on his way home from Geneva, and presumably discussed with the Secretary of State the bearing of disarmament upon economics. Mr. Davis will be in Washington next week and will talk with the President. There is not much hope among Americans generally of any agreement of value at London, and it would be unfortunate to tie up the negotiations there with the question of the strength the United States must have in order to protect its territory and interests.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WILL BOARD the new cruiser Indianapolis and make the run on her to Hampton Roads. Over the radio, Secretary Howe predicted that the vessel would be required to run at top speed. This is in accord with the Administration's record. The President may expect a hearty welcome from the officers and men of the Indianapolis and indeed from the Navy generally. They will show him that in spite of the pay cuts they have suffered they are on their toes and are ready and anxious to demonstrate their efficiency. The President will have an opportunity aboard the cruiser to renew his contact with the Fleet. He will find many changes and many improvements since he was Assistant Secretary, but the factor of the man behind the gun remains constant. Take care of him, Mr. President.

Service Humor

Off the Scuppers

A young naval cadet was being put through the paces by an old sea captain.

"What would you do if a sudden storm sprang up on the starboard?"

"Throw out an anchor, sir."

"What would you do if another storm sprang up aft?"

"Throw out another anchor, sir."

"And if another terrific storm sprang up forward, what would you do?"

"Throw over another anchor."

"Hold on!" said the captain. "Where are you getting all your anchors from?"

"From the same place as you're getting your storms."

Some Speed

There had been a shooting affair around one of the barns and the officer had rounded up a couple of colored stable hands who had been present when the doings took place. The first one, still shaking was being questioned.

"Did you see the shooting?" questioned the JAG.

"No sah, Ah didn' see it, yo' honnah, but Ah sure hear de bullet. En fac' Ah done heah dat same bullet twice, sah."

"What's that," exclaimed the judge, "you heard the same bullet whiz twice? How come?"

"Well, sah, Ah heard it once when it passed me an' once when Ah passed it."

When the second boy took the stand the judge asked:

"Where were you when the shots were fired?"

The lad rolled his eyes and replied:

"Ah was fixing up some bandages on a hoss when the first shot was fired and when de secon' one was fired Ah was passin' de end of the range."

Insight

A fine robust soldier, an Irishman, after serving Uncle Sam for some time became greatly reduced in weight, owing to exposure and scanty rations, until he got leave of absence to go home and recuperate. He arrived at his home station looking very much of a wreck. Just as he stepped off the train one of his old friends rushed up to him and said, "Well, well Pat, I am glad to see you're back from the front."

"Begorra, I knew I was getting thin, but I niver thought you could see that much."

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

The New Program and Treaty Strength—Despite the projected construction of 32 naval vessels under the authority of the Industrial Recovery Act, the close of the London Treaty in 1936 will find the United States still considerably below treaty strength, with Great Britain and Japan practically up to the limits prescribed. The United States will, in underage vessels built and vessels building, be 167,830 tons short in 1936 of the Navy contemplated under the naval treaties. Great Britain, if its announced year by year program is maintained, will in that year be approximately 39,000 tons short of treaty strength, while Japan, if no provision for further construction is made, will be short 10,029 tons in destroyer tonnage in 1936. The latter shortage, however, is offset by the fact that Nippon has taken advantage of a special exemption in the London Treaty and in 1936 will be 12,672 tons in excess of her allowed submarine tonnage. Actually, then, Japan will in underage vessels, be up to and above her treaty allotment.

In capital ships, each nation will of course possess its present battle fleet. As this category is "frozen" by treaty, the United States will have 455,400 tons, Great Britain, 473,650 tons, and Japan 298,400 tons. Some of these vessels are now or will be in 1936 more than 20 years old, but cannot be classed as overage in the true sense as they cannot be replaced until the expiration of the London Treaty.

In aircraft carriers, the United States will lack but one of being up to treaty strength, if the two new carriers are 20,000 tons each. The U. S. will then be 15,200 tons short of her treaty allowance of 135,000 tons. Great Britain, with the same allowance as the United States, has six carriers built, none building, leaving a shortage of 19,650 tons in 1936, if this carrier is not built. Japan, with a treaty allowance of 81,000 tons, has four built totaling 68,870 tons and, one building of 8,000 tons. Thus she is actually up to treaty strength in this category, as the slight excess tonnage is not large enough for another carrier. However under the treaty, the Japanese aircraft carrier Hosho is in the same category as our Langley, and can be replaced if desired, although it will be underage in 1936.

Each of the three leading powers will possess the full number of heavy cruisers at the close of the treaty. The United States will have 18 ten thousand ton cruisers at that time. Great Britain has at present 183,686 tons in 19 heavy cruisers and none building. She must, under the treaty, scrap the Frobisher and Effingham during 1936 to bring her within her limit of 146,800 tons. Japan has now 12 cruisers, totaling 107,800 tons, plus 2 ships of 15,720 tons total which are overage. The 12 will be underage in 1936. Japan's limit is 108,400 tons in this class. At the close of the treaty the United States will be 33,000 tons short of its allotment of light cruisers. With the ten now in the Fleet and the four to be built under the new program, the U. S. will have 110,500 tons in this category. Great Britain's treaty allowance of cruisers "B" is 192,200 tons. She has 24 underage cruisers totaling 114,020 tons; nine overage vessels of 36,855 tons; and 14 ships of 88,000 tons building. In 1936, Britain will be short in underage tonnage 65,220 tons, if no more ships are laid down. However, in England, it has been the practice to lay down regular annual programs of three cruisers, 9 destroyers, three submarines and miscellaneous craft. The carrying forward of this program will build Great Britain to treaty strength in this category. Japan, with an allowance of 100,450, has at present 17 light cruisers totaling 81,455 tons. In addition, there are four building or appropriated for which will bring her to treaty strength in this class. In addition, Japan has three cruisers of 11,920 tons en toto which are overage.

Destroyers are the ships which will be most noticeably lacking in the United States Fleet in 1936. On that date we will have but 32 vessels totaling 50,800 tons which are not overage. This will leave us 99,200 tons or 65 destroyers short of treaty strength. In addition we will have 267,470 tons overage. Great Britain, with the same treaty allowance in destroyers as the United States, 150,000 tons, has 43 underage destroyers totaling 56,974 tons built, 28 vessels of 38,600 tons building, together with 116 vessels of 123,492 tons of overage tonnage. If no more destroyers were laid down by Great Britain, she would be short 60,796 tons or 40 vessels in underage tonnage in 1936. However, the regular annual program of nine destroyers, even if not exceeded, will provide for 27 of these ships, leaving a shortage of 13 vessels or 19,700 tons. Japan is at present in excess of the 105,500 tons allowed to her by the London Treaty, having 71 destroyers of 92,385 tons in underage vessels, 31 ships of 28,680 tons in overage tonnage, and 12 vessels of 16,536 tons now building or appropriated for. However, in 1935 and 1936, Japan will have 7 destroyers go overage which can be laid down in those years. Thus she will be 10,029 tons short of her treaty allotment in 1936, if no provision is made for these vessels.

In submarine tonnage the United States will be 20,430 tons short of the 52,700 ton limit in 1936. At present we have 51 vessels totaling 51,290 tons in underage ships, and 31 ships of 16,500 tons in overage submarines. By 1936, however, the United States will have but 24 underage submarines, including the four in the projected program, a total of 32,270, leaving us 16 undersea craft short of our allotment. Great Britain, with the same submarine allowance as the United States, at present has 36 underage submarines for a total of 42,754 tons; has 20 overage vessels totaling 10,710 tons; and has building 11 of 12,611 tons. By 1936 Britain must build five more submarines or else she will be 4,961 tons short of the 52,700 ton objective. Her regular annual program of three submarines laid down a year will take care of this shortage. Japan has at present 69 underage submarines, a total of 76,408 tons. In addition, she has 9 submarines of 13,100 tons building, and two vessels totaling 1,434 in overage craft. In 1936, Japan will have 12,672 tons of submarines in excess of her treaty limit of 52,700 tons. By a special provision of the London Treaty, she is permitted to lay down submarines prior to 1936 in anticipation of ships going overage in 1937 and 1938.

In brief, we will lack one carrier, three light cruisers, 65 destroyers and 18 submarines; Great Britain will lack one carrier, and 13 destroyers, and Japan 7 destroyers of attaining treaty strength in 1936, under the programs projected or announced by the three nations to date. Putting it another way, the United States will still be three cruisers, 52 destroyers and 18 submarines short of parity with Great Britain.

Army to Get New Attack Planes—Work is progressing satisfactorily on the 46 new fast two-seater attack airplanes, known as the Curtiss A-12, which are now being built for the U. S. Army Air Corps by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Company of Buffalo, New York.

The Curtiss A-12, which is somewhat similar in outward appearance to the Curtiss A-8, is a low wing monoplane of all metal construction and is equipped with slots and flaps. The slots are built in the leading edge and the flaps on the trailing edge of the wing to provide a relatively low landing speed. The Curtiss A-12 is powered with one Wright "Cyclone" 700 h. p. engine.

Danger Area of Ball Cartridges—The stocks of cartridges, ball, caliber .30, M1906, of grade suitable for use in rifles, are rapidly becoming exhausted and it will shortly be necessary to use cartridges, ball, caliber .30, M1, for training with the rifles. The War Department is calling attention to the fact that the cartridge, ball, caliber .30, M1, has a range of approximately 5,500 yards while the cartridge, ball, caliber .30, M1906 has an extreme range of approximately 3,450 yards. The danger area as outlined in TR 140-5 is therefore greater when using the cartridge, ball, caliber .30, M1.

A survey of the target ranges, both of the Regular Army and of the civilian components, should be made to insure that the requirements for the danger areas prescribed on page 6, TR 140-5, can be met when cartridges, ball, caliber .30, M1, are being used.

Prescribing of Liquor—Pending the printing of changes in AR 40-505 (Medical Department—Medical Attendance—General Provisions), Dec. 15, 1924, paragraph 8 of those regulations has been changed to read as follows:

"8. Restrictions on the dispensing of alcohol and alcoholic liquors.—In rendering medical attendance to persons under these regulations, medical officers and contract surgeons will not prescribe alcohol or alcoholic liquors except in cases of actual sickness, and then only when a definite therapeutic reason therefor exists."

Accuracy Life of Caliber .50 Machine-Gun Barrels Used for Antiaircraft fire.—Pending the printing of changes in pertinent Technical Regulations, the War Department is disseminating the following for the information of all concerned:

The accuracy life of caliber .50 machine-gun barrels under normal operating conditions consists of about 200 rounds per pound of barrel; that is, a 7-pound barrel will last about 1,400 rounds, a 9-pound barrel will last about 1,800 rounds, and an 11-pound barrel about 2,200 rounds. Approximately 2,500 rounds is the maximum accuracy life possible under favorable conditions. The above figures are materially reduced if burst consist of 300 rounds and if there is no interval between bursts, even though every attempt is made to keep the water jacket full of circulating water.

Until the new equipment which provides for improved cooling of the muzzle and of the barrel, is available, bursts will be limited and in no case will exceed a maximum of 200 rounds. Whenever possible, an opportunity should be given the gun to cool between bursts.

Subject to the foregoing provisions, the use of tracer cartridges will not materially decrease the accuracy life, even though this type of ammunition is used exclusively.

In an ordinary five course practice where not more than 2,500 rounds are fired, it is not dangerous to fire these guns without water chests and pumps provided the water in the jacket is changed and the barrels are given time to cool between courses.

Ordnance Notes—The engines and transmissions for the four Half-Track Cars, T1E1, under manufacture at Rock Island Arsenal, have been received from the Cadillac Motor Company.

The eight Armored Cars, M1, which were manufactured at Rock Island Arsenal, have been delivered—six to the 1st Cavalry Regiment (Mechanized) at Ft. Knox; one to Aberdeen Proving Ground, and one to Ft. Monmouth, N. J. The latter will be equipped with radio and then shipped, through the Proving Ground, to the 1st Cavalry Regiment (Mechanized) at Ft. Knox.

The specifications for light armor plate were revised as of May 1 to take advantage of the improvement in armor plate characteristics as developed by commercial manufacturers. A considerable quantity of plate is being procured for test purposes at Frankford Arsenal and Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Efforts to secure a type of tire for military vehicles which is not vulnerable to small arms fire has resulted in arrangements for a test of a sponge rubber type of filler for pneumatic casings. Preliminary test of one of these tires indicates very promising results may be expected from tires of this character. The test will include determination of any detrimental effects on the performance characteristics of vehicles on which they are mounted which may be due to the increased mass of the tire.

» Choice of Army and Navy Officers

In selecting a binocular experienced Officers prefer the Bausch & Lomb make. They secure a sharper, clearer image—more detail.

When the Coast Guard required glasses for the utmost visibility under all weather conditions, the Federal Government ordered Bausch & Lomb Binoculars.

In our 32-page Catalog you will find a glass ideally suited to your needs. A copy will be forwarded on request. Optical dealers will gladly have you try a Bausch & Lomb Glass at your convenience.

You'll take more pride in driving the STYLE LEADER

There is sound reason for believing that most people would be better pleased with an Oldsmobile than with almost any other car they could buy. . . . Why do we say this? Well, in the first place, people take more pride in driving the Style Leader—and that is exactly what Oldsmobile is. No other car in America is so smart, so beautiful or so generally attractive. . . . It pleases most people when they feel that they are enjoying something at a bargain cost—and no other car has ever offered Style Leadership at Oldsmobile's low price. . . . It makes most people happy when their cars perform to their highest expectations—without a single shortcoming on any point. And here again, Oldsmobile more than measures up to the requirement. In fact, many people insist that Oldsmobile performance is the most satisfactory they have ever experienced in any car. . . . So we say again, in all sincerity, we think you would drive an Oldsmobile with more pride and greater satisfaction than almost any other car you could buy. We should like to prove this with a complete demonstration, at any time you say.

The Quartermaster Detachment, Ft. Banks, Mass., celebrated the 158th anniversary of the Quartermaster Corps by taking in a doubleheader between the Boston Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates and a dinner at the Bellevue Hotel in Boston after the game.

The commanding officer, Colonel Bunker, and Captain Gibson, the adjutant, and representatives from the 9th Coast Artillery, Medical Department and Ordnance Department were present. Colonel Bunker gave a talk on the importance of Quartermaster work in connection with the Harbor Defenses. An enjoyable evening was had by all present.

At Great Lakes Training on Thursday evening, June 8, Admiral and Mrs. Cluverius presented Dorothea Kays, contralto, and John Kessler, pianist, in a beautiful musicale followed by a reception. Miss Kays, the daughter of Commander and Mrs. Harlow Kays of the Training Station, has had a great success in her profession, but this marked her debut at home. She showed unusual talent, a fine voice, beauty, histrionic ability and a delightful personality. In Russian and Spanish costumes furnished by the celebrated artist, Margaret Breen, she gave groups of Russian and Spanish songs in the original text with really amazing interpretative ability and with charm and grace.

Admiral Cluverius, in one of his delightfully witty speeches, opened the concert by introducing the well known artist and teacher, Margaret Chapman Byers of St. Louis, Mo., Miss Kays' teacher, who gave, before each group, very interesting and delightfully simple explanations of each song, gleaned in her long experience as an artist and teacher in this country and Europe.

The two groups of piano selections by the St. Louis composer and pianist, John Kessler, especially his own composition, "Melody," and the difficult "Etude de Concert," by Donyani, showed Mr. Kessler to be an artist of unusual gifts, and rounded out a colorful and unusually original and artistic program.

A large and representative North Shore, Naval and Army audience filled the large field house auditorium.

Commander and Mrs. Kays entertained at dinner at their quarters before the concert in honor of Mrs. Byers. A beautiful dinner was served in the gardens overlooking the lake. Besides Admiral and Mrs. Cluverius a number of well known Chicago people were guests.

Capt. Washington I. Chambers, USN-Ret, and Mrs. Chambers, who make their home in Washington at the Martinique, left this week for Coronado, Calif., where they will spend the summer.

Brig. Gen. Matthew A. DeLaney, MC, USA, and Mrs. DeLaney spent several days in Washington this week at the Martinique.

Comdr. Alexander M. Charlton, USN, and Mrs. Charlton will arrive in Washington the 24th and will be at the Martinique for an indefinite stay.

Capt. John F. O'Mara, USN, and Mrs. O'Mara spent several days in Washington this week at the Martinique before going to their new station at Charleston, S. C.

Mrs. Richard E. Cummins and Bill Cummins are closing their home in Detroit and leaving for Grayling, Mich., where they have taken a cottage to be near Colonel Cummins, who is on duty with the CCC in that vicinity.

Among the guests at the West Point Hotel, West Point, N. Y., during June week were Mrs. W. Frank James, Mrs. C. A. Meals, Mrs. Harding Polk, Molly Polk, Frances Fisby Cairnes, Mrs. D. W.

Women's Organizations

The Society of the Daughters of the United States Army has opened a new club room in the Infantry Association Building at 1115 17th Street, opposite the Mayflower Hotel. The Society, whose National Headquarters has recently been moved to Washington from Fort Benning, Georgia, plans to make this club room the center of local activities and a place of social and business meetings. It will be open every day, except Saturday and Sunday, from 10 A. M. to 4.30 P. M. when a member will be in charge.

Mr. Walter E. Luetzenkirchen whose drawings of Cabinet Officers have been appearing in the rotogravure section of the Washington Post, kindly loaned his original sketches to be exhibited at the opening of the club room. They may be seen there during this week. There are other interesting exhibits of the work of Mrs. B. B. Sewall, Miss Anne Pendleton and other members. Mrs. Beale Bloomer and Mrs. John Hunt donated flowers for the opening and it is suggested that members who have gardens might help to keep the Headquarters attractive by contributing flowers from time to time. The nucleus of a library has been formed and donations of books and magazines will be gladly received. Many surprise features of the services of the D. U. S. A. may be learned from a reading of the Bulletin Board. These services alone will make a visit to the club room well worthwhile to all members and other Army women.

From its organization in 1928 by Mrs. Charles D. Roberts, the Society of the Daughters of the United States Army has increased to ten chapters located throughout the country and in the Hawaiian Department and Canal Zone. The local chapter, started in January, 1932, has grown from 10 to 200 members. The objects of the Society are to carry on the traditions of the Service, to support patriotic activities, to establish friendly relations between civil and military communities, and to preserve the identity of Regular Army Officers' daughters who have married or who have lost touch with the Army. Daughters, granddaughters, step-daughters and adopted daughters of commissioned officers of the Regular Army of the United States are eligible for membership.

The executive officers of the Washington Chapter include Mrs. J. H. B. Bogman, President, Miss Frances Webster and Mrs. Detlow M. Marthinson, Vice-Presidents, Miss Katherine Andrews, Secretary, and Mrs. Paul J. Mueller, Treasurer.

Ft. Geo. G. Meade, Md.—Miss Dorothy Davis and Miss Eugenie Harris entertained the Ft. Geo. G. Meade chapter of the Daughters of the US Army with a buffet luncheon June 13 at Miss Davis' home. He was born Nov. 30, 1843, at York, Me. He entered the USN Jan. 28, 1863, and served with honor during the Civil War, leaving that service Nov. 20, 1865. He re-entered the Navy as an ensign in September, 1866, and resigned on Oct. 2, 1868.

He spent about six years of his service as superintendent of the construction of life-saving stations and as inspector in the former Life Saving Service. During the Spanish-American War he commanded the Coast Guard cutter Galveston, which was actively engaged in that war. Commander Dennett was an officer of wide experience and attainments and leaves behind a long and honorable record. He will be buried near his home in Maine.

2nd Lt. Edmund Lybrand Jackson's brief career in the U. S. Army Air Corps, was brought to an abrupt halt as death claimed the youthful twenty-two year old Reserve Officer of Langley Field, Va.

While participating in machine gun practice, June 20, the P-12 type ship which Lieutenant Jackson was piloting, dove into the ground target on Plum Tree Island. Death was instantaneous as his mates rushed to the scene of the fatal accident.

Lieutenant Jackson was born in Wagoner, S. C. He graduated from Citadel College in Charleston, S. C., completing four years training with the ROTC. Entering the Primary Flying School at Brooks Field, Texas, June 1, 1931, he was captain of his class. He graduated with high honors from the Advanced Flying School, Kelly Field, Tex., in the

June, 1932, class, where he was awarded his "Wings."

Reporting to Langley Field June 20, he was assigned to the 33rd Pursuit Squadron for duty and was designated as Assistant Supply Officer. Lieutenant Jackson had but ten more days to serve on active duty before returning to civil life.

He is survived by his widow, a bride of a few months, and his father and mother. The remains were shipped to his home in Wagoner, S. C., following funeral services which were held in the St. John's Church, Hampton, Va., June 21.

Higher Speeds for Cargo Vessels

(From the Marine Journal)

While we are marking time on the matter of replacing our slow and uneconomical cargo fleet with ships of high speeds, Japan is forging ahead with an ambitious replacement program via of the familiar subsidy route. According to a bulletin from the National Council of American Shipbuilders, Nippon is out to place fast ships in the cargo category without further delay. The Bulletin states in part:

In contrast with this situation at home, the foreign press reports continued progress in the building of modern cargo vessels in Japan.

The Ship Improvement Society of Japan, which was organized last October, is carrying out the plan to build 200,000 tons of modern cargo ships to replace some 400,000 tons of obsolete vessels 25 years old or more. The entire building program is scheduled for completion by the end of 1934, and up to March this year the construction of ten cargo vessels had been reported as in progress.

Three of these ten ships will be of 16 knots speed, four of 18 knots, two of 18.5 knots and one of 18.75 knots which sufficiently indicates the modern trend for higher speeds in cargo carriers. The Bulletin further observes that:

The Japanese government is encouraging the construction of modern cargo tonnage to replace obsolete tonnage by the award of subsidies at the rate of 50 yen per gross ton of new vessel, on the condition that the new vessels are of steel, exceed 4,000 gross tons each, and are built to an extent not to exceed one-half of the gross tonnage scrapped.

While a total of 11,000,000 yen (nearly $5,500,000 at par) have been authorized to date, reported subsidies of 3,852,000 yen have been granted, one-half being paid on the laying of the keel and the balance when the vessels are commissioned.

Financial Digest

The Federal Reserve Board's condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in 90 leading cities on June 14 shows increases for the week of $224,000,000 in net demand deposits, $36,000,000 in loans and investments and $73,000,000 in reserve balances with Federal reserve banks, and decreases of $12,000,000 in time deposits, $23,000,000 in Government deposits and $7,000,000 in borrowings from Federal reserve banks.

Loans on securities increased $62,000,000 at reporting member banks in the New York district and $56,000,000 at all reporting banks. "All other" loans declined $7,000,000 in the New York district and $8,000,000 at all reporting banks.

Holdings of United States Government securities declined $45,000,000 in the New York district and $23,000,000 at all reporting member banks. Holdings of other securities increased $9,000,000 in the New York district and $11,000,000 at all reporting banks.

Borrowings of weekly reporting member banks from Federal reserve banks aggregated $53,000,000 on June 14, or $7,000,000 less than the week before.

Licensed member banks formerly included in the condition statement of member banks in 101 leading cities, but not now included in the weekly statement, had total loans and investments of $738,000,000 and net demand, time and Government deposits of $701,000,000 on June 14, compared with $726,000,000 and $678,000,000, respectively, on June 7.

Army Budget Cuts

arsenal and depot activities, its research and development studies, its re-equipment, including aircraft, and its armament activities as well as certain curtailments in its motor and animal programs. It will also have to reduce expenditures for its employees and clerks—field employees at arsenals, depots and posts will be seriously affected.

"The National Guard will retain its existing personnel and be able to conduct all field and partial armory training. While the National Guard will have to suspend some of its activities, it is estimated that the funds available will permit two weeks field training and at least twelve, and probably twenty, armory training drills.

"The Reserve Officers' Training Corps will be maintained but with curtailment in supplies, uniforms, equipment, and also with about one-third reduction in its summer training camps activity.

"The Organized Reserve is now associated with the Regular Army in the Civilian Conservation Corps work in so far as there is a shortage of Regular Army officers for this work. As most of the Reserve Officers associated with the Civilian Conservation Corps are of Junior grades, some funds have been reserved which will permit the training of a few of the key field officers of the Reserve Corps, in accordance with the annual program of training for Organized Reserves.

"The Citizens' Military Training Camps will be held as scheduled but with a reduction in attendance to meet the limited funds available. This reduction will limit all training to candidates who have had previously at least one summer's training in the Citizens' Military Training Camps.

"The Army school system which provides schooling for all components, including West Point and Air cadets, will continue."

At the same time notification of the policies required by the reduced funds available was dispatched to the Chiefs of all War Department Arms, Services and Bureaus, and Corps Area and Department Commanders, as follows:

"Due to the limitation which has been placed on the withdrawal of funds from the Treasury during the fiscal year 1934, the following instructions will be observed:

"Field training and target practice for the Regular Army will be suspended during the fiscal year 1934, except that recruits will fire such courses as are deemed necessary to become reasonably proficient in the use of small arms. Additional compensation for qualification in arms will be continued during the fiscal year 1934 only to the extent necessary to compensate for one year after date of qualification those men who are qualified and authorized to receive such compensation on June 20, 1933. Detailed instructions will follow.

"It is contemplated that Army schools be reopened in the fall. Detailed instructions with regard to personnel will follow in due course.

"National Guard will hold its annual two weeks' field training and not less than twelve armory drills for each organization, generally distributed evenly throughout the fiscal year 1934.

"Limited expenditures for fourteen-day training of Reserve officers will be specifically authorized later.

"No change in Reserve Officers Training Corps and Citizens Military Training Camps summer training already covered in radiogram June 10, 1933."

While the reduction represents a severe blow to the Army and to National Defense, it must not be forgotten that the original figure mentioned freely in the press as the administration's objective for army reduction was $90,000,000 and that through the efforts of those guiding the destiny of the War Department the cut was reduced by nearly $40,000,000. Personnel, both commissioned and enlisted was saved to the regular army and the personnel of the reserve and National Guard components was preserved intact. While the field training of the regulars, including target practice, was lost the National Guard retains its summer training and at least 12, probably more, of its armory drills, the reserves will have about two-thirds of its regular summer training, and the ROTC and CMTC will be trained on a reduced schedule.

Supply, arsenal, and depot facilities, as well as research and development work will suffer severely. It is possible that the building program accorded the Navy under the public works program may afford some relief to the ordnance establishments, inasmuch as in the past it has been the policy for Army ordnance arsenals to build some of the guns for naval work and to furnish other materiel such as cartridge cases and shells.

The brief statement that army schools would be reopened in the Fall definitely kills a persistent rumor that the gigantic task of handling the organization and supervision of the Civilian Conservation Corps would tax War Department facilities to the extent that it would be impossible to operate the service schools during the school term starting next September.

Taking the Infantry School as an example, of the eighty instructors in the school who were present for duty as such when the School closed May 22, there remains a total of eleven who are carrying on the activities of the School at the present time and preparing schedules and programs for next year. A number of those now absent are in California forests with companies of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the remainder are scattered over several Southern states on the same duty.

Naval Reserve Training

Naval reserve training activities, wiped out under the reduced 1934 budget, have been substantially restored, it was made known this week.

Two-thirds of the original appropriation for the Reserve is expected to be allowed, permitting the holding of the summer cruises with pay and the possibly 24 of the scheduled 48 armory drills. The original appropriation was $3,346,960. This was reduced to $600,000, and under the new arrangement, $2,115,653 will be allotted to the Reserve.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, in reply to newspapermen this week said:

"Authority has been issued authorizing summer training periods for all Fleet Reserves, seagoing and aviation units, and in addition to that we hope to obtain funds to permit the holding of 24 drills on a pay basis during the fiscal year 1934."

Standard of the World

Of few products can it be said with truth that they actually set the standard for others of their kind. And among these few, most surely, is a Cadillac automobile.

For almost twenty-five years, Cadillac cars have occupied this unusual position in the automotive industry—in fact, since 1908, when Cadillac was awarded the famous DeWar Trophy for perfect interchangeability of parts.

Year after year, the public has grown more aware of Cadillac's position, until today you hear it affirmed on every hand.

"She's a little Cadillac, isn't she?" boasts the owner who had just taken possession of one of the smaller motor cars.

"She has a little of the 'feel' of a Cadillac," says the new possessor of the medium-priced car.

"This performs more like a Cadillac than any other car I ever drove," explains another owner.

And, again, you hear the good-natured apology, "Of course, it's not a Cadillac!"

A moment's reflection will serve to recall that you have heard these very remarks, time and time again. Practically never is any other car used as the standard of comparison—almost always a Cadillac.

This, of course, did not "just happen." Reputations such as this do not "grow up," like Topsy. They have their basis, always, in an actual superiority of fact. And back of this superiority is usually found an ideal, religiously adhered to, year after year.

In the case of Cadillac, the will to leadership has become a greater spur to achievement than any creed or law could possibly be. It simply never occurs to anyone at Cadillac that Cadillac is privileged to do anything else than excel in all things.

It is out of this spirit that has come Cadillac's long list of basic contributions to the motor car industry. The self-starter, precision manufacture, the closed body, the Syncro-Mesh transmission, the 16-cylinder engine, the 90-degree V-type engine—all of them came, and could have come only, from the Cadillac will to achievement.

We feel certain that most buyers in the fine-car field appreciate the position that Cadillac occupies. Cadillac sales, at least, certainly indicate as much. But for those who may not have had occasion to give the matter particular thought, we wish merely to suggest that the "Standard of the World" is always a safe measure to follow in choosing any commodity.
